Dr. Paul White Checks Ike At Farm Today; To MeetNewsmen

James C. Hagerty, White House press secretary, announced this morning that President Eisenhower had extended an invitation to Giovanni Gronchi, President of Italy, to visit the United States. President Gronchi has accepted the invitation and will arrive in Washington for a three-day visit Feb. 28 through March 1.

Asked if high level talks were in prospect, Hagerty replied: "I'm sure there will be."

Gronchi's visit will follow by a month the scheduled Washington visit of British premier Sir Anthony Eden.

Dr. Paul Dudley White, Boston heart specialist, who was called in as consultant after President Eisenhower's September 24 heart attack in Denver, personally examined the Chief Executive at his farm home today for the first time in five weeks.

Assisting at today's examination were Maj. Gen. Howard M. Snyder, the President's personal physician, and Col. Thomas W. Mattingly of Walter Reed Hospital, who conducted the searching medical examination of Mr. Eisenhower last Saturday at Walter Reed. Dr. White attended a press conference this afternoon at 2:30 p.m. to brief reporters on the President's condition. The chief medical question seems to be whether Mr. Eisenhower's recovery has been slowed by the active scheduled he maintained until a few days ago. After his examination of the President in Denver, Dr. White declared that he would know better in another month "the extent of the President's caridac reserve and what problems increased activity might bring." His main point at that time was that the Chief Executive should strike a happy medium by avoiding too strenuous exertion and too much inactivity.

To Turn On Lights On Sunday at 5 p.m. President Eisenhower is scheduled to partleipate in lighting the nation's Christmas trees from the President's office at Gettysburg College. Mr. Eisenhower is expected to speak briefly from the college office at about 5:10 or 5:11 o'clock. The program will be carried live on TV. When the President pushes the button at Gettysburg, trees at the White House and elsewhere will be lighted.

CONEWAGO CONSIDERS NEW

SCHOOL SET-UP which would link Hanover with four nearby townships in development of school facilities was discussed at a meeting of the Baresville School Thursday evening.

The districts of Hanover and Penn. Manheim and West Manheim Townships in York County and Conewago Townships in Adams County were represented.

Three communities were named to delve into the problems of creating the proposed system. They will report at a general meeting scheduled Wednesday, Jan. 25, at the Baresville School

Primary Objective

The primary objective under the proposed system would be establishment of a new junior high school to accommodate students from the districts involved. In past discussions it has been disclosed that in the event of construction of such a school the present Hanover Junior High School building could be used for elementary school purposes. Another plan considered would involve building instead a new senior high school, permitting use of the present Eichelberger Senior High School for accommodation of other grades, most likely junior high classes.

The cmmittees named by the presidents of the districts include: Educational program and district operation, Kenneth W. Leister, president of the Hanover board, chairman; Burnell Dubs, Penn; J. Earl Wildasin, Manheim; Clark Wentz, West Manheim, and Barry D. Brammer, president of the Conewago

FOUR GIFTS TO DEVELOPMENT OFFICE LISTED

Four gifts to the Gettysburg College Development program, each of them amounting to $500 or more, were announced today by Dr. C. L. S. Raby, associate for development.

A donation of $1,500 from the G. C. Murphy Company Foundation was received by the development office this week through the manager of the local Murphy store. Another recent contribution of $1,000 came from the W. T. Grant Company Foundation.

On November 15 the Jones and Laughlin Steel Corporation of Pittsburgh announced a program of Aid to Education which provides for a gift-matching plan. It provides that if a company employe makes a gift to the college or university from which he has earned a degree, Jones and Laughlin will match his gift with an equal sum up to $500.

The Gettysburg Developmen, program was the recipient Friday of a check from Jones and Laughlin for $500, the first income it has received from the new fund.

The gift was a result of a recent gift to the college "in excess of $500" by Dr. Adam Hazlett, Pittsburgh, vice president of Jones and Laughlin and an alumnus of Gettysburg College in the class of 1910. He received an honorary LL.D. degree from the college last June.

CONEWAGO TWP. CONSIDERS NEW SCHOOL SET-UP

Creation of a new school system which would link Hanover with four nearby townships in development of school facilities was discussed at a meeting ot the Baresville School Thursday evening.

The districts of Hanover and Penn, Manheim and West Manheim Townships in York County and Conewago Townships in Adams County were represented.

Three communities were named to delve into the problems of creating the proposed system. They will report at a general meeting scheduled Wednesday, Jan. 25, at the Baresville School.

Primary Objective

The primary objective under the proposed system would be establishment of a new junior high school to accommodate students from the districts involved. In past discussions it has been disclosed that in the event of construction of such a school the present Hanover Junior High School building could be used for elementary school purposes. Another plan considered would involve building instead a new senior high school, permitting use of the present FOUR INJURED, Eichelberger Senior High School for accommodation of other grades, most likely junior high classes.

The emmittees named by the presidents of the districts include: Educational program and district operation, Kenneth W. Leister, president of the Hanover board, chairman; Burnell Dubs, Penn; J. Earl Wildasin, Manheim; Clark Wentz, West Manheim, and Barry D. Brammer, president of the Conewago

Other Members

Finance and arrangements, George Myers, vice president of West Manheim, chairman; Donald Hoffman, and Henry Leppo, Conewago.

The Gettysburg Development program was the recipient Friday of a check from Jones and Laughlin for $500, the first income it has received from the new fund.

The gift was a result of a recent gift to the college "in excess of $500" by Dr. Adam Hazlett, Pittsburgh. vice president of Jones and Laughlin and an alumnus of Cettysburg College in the class of 1910. He received an honorary LL.D. degree from the college last June.

SCHOOLS SHORT ON FUNDS BUT

Adams County's joint school systems this week pail $110,000 rental on their schools and Fairfield jointure is planning to pay its rental at a meeting Monday.

Needs Funds Soon

Most jointures were able to meet the rentals because some districts have some extra funds on hand. Districts financially handicapped mostly have been able to postpone payments to the jointure because other districts were able to "pay ahead" on what they owe the joint systems. So far only a few discricts have had to borrow to keep going as a result of the arrangement.

The survey showed that most jointures have funds available, or know where to obtain funds, to meet January payrolls. After January, however, the problem will become "exceedingly acute," most school officials agreed.

Most distressed financially are those districts with largest reimbursements from the state. The state pays from 50 to 86 per cent of the cost of schools in the county.

Winter Dysentery Is Dairy Problem From the middle of December until early spring, stabled dairy cows are subject to winter dysentery Very few cows die of this disease, and some may recover without any treatment but milk production is often seriously affected.

The disease spreads rapidly and the entire herd is usually affected within a week after the first animals ! become sick. Affected animals have a severe watery diarrhea; milk production may drop as much as 70 per cent and cows often become thin and dehydrated. When early treatment is given, however, the severe symptoms rarely last more than three or four days. Many cows take a long time getting back to full production. Although a bacterium causes the disease, some suspect a virus may also be involved.

Since the disease is highly infectious and can be carried from farm to farm by humans, visitors should be kept out of feed alleys and away from feed. Do not visit herds where the infection exists, avoid abrupt changes in feed and barn temperature and provide good ventilation. Veterinarians can help the herd overcome this infection with early diagnosis and immediate treatment. Vitamin feed supplements may be prescribed to hasten recovery.

Try to get set up so you have water under pressure in the milk house. Preferably it should come through a mixing "T" and then through a hose. This way, you can maintain proper temperatures of water under pressure, to do a really effective job of rinsing your dairy equipment.

Winter Dysentery Is Dairy Problem From the middle of December until early spring, stabled dairy cows are subject to winter dysentery. Very few cows die of this disease. and some may recover without any treatment but milk production is ften seriously affected.

The disease spreads rapidly and the entire herd is usually affected within a week after the first animals become sick. Affected animals have a severe watery diarrhea; milk production may drop as much as 70 per cent and cows often become thin and dehydrated. When early treatment is given, however, the severe symptoms rarely last more than three or four days. Many cows take a long time getting back to full production. Although a bacterium causes the disease, some suspect a virus may also be involved. Since the disease is highly infectious and can be carried from farm to farm by humans, visitors should be kept out of feed alleys and away from feed. Do not visit herds where the infection exists, avoid abrupt changes in feed and barn temperaure and provide good ventilation.

Veterinarians can help the herd overcome this infection with early diagnosis and immediate treatment. Vitamin feed supplements may be prescribed to hasten recovery.

Quality Timber Sells At Premium Adams County farmers will profit by using the same judgment in selling timber that they do in marketing other farm products. Origin Of Nativity Scene

At first the Presepe or Christmas crib in the churches was quite simple but became more elaborate as the years passed. It was St. Francis of Assisi who made popular the reenactment of Christ's birth by scene in the little town of Greccio, Italy, in 1224. The good saint, called "The Little Brother of Mankind," wanted to bring the teachings of Sacred Scripture closer to the people and to show his followers that Christ had an humble beginning.

By nature, Italians are musical. The country has long been noted for her holiday musicians, the Pipers of Rome, called the "Pifferai." They were, for the most part, shepherds, who came down from the mountains of Umbria and Abruzzi. They were usually dressed in sheepskins but sometimes they wore a blue linen coat with a red vest and broadbrimmed hats trimmed with feathers and tassels. They came to town on St. Catherine's Eve. Acting Director T. H. Miller announced Friday that the bureau will make the study as one of four air pollution research projects it is undertaking in cooperation with the public health service.

The Weather Bureau and the National Bureau of Standards will work on other phases of the problem, the Health Service said Thursday night.

Allocates $98,000 For Project The Health Service has agreed to allocate $98,000 to the bureau for the work, authorized under a 1955 law providing for a five-year nationwide campaign to make the air in communities more healthful

The work on exhaust gases of automobiles, trucks, buses and other vehicles will be done at the Bureau of Mines petroleum experiment station at Bartlesville,

"Exhaust gases from automobile motors and other internal combustion engines contribute significantly to contaminants in city air." Miller said. "Development of methods for eliminating these contaminants will be speeded if we know more about them."

Mechanic Joe Speaking: "Few motorists realize it but the starting motor should not be used continuously for more than 30 seconds Always give it a moment's rest between efforts to get the engine under way as this will spare it heat and strain . It is well that the starting motor asks this much consideration because continuous cranking makes it difficult to tell just what the engine really needs n your effort to start it You are then less likely to flood it with raw gasoline or forget that it falls to fire because exposed ignition parts are wet from condensation. There are plenty of reasons why but one a friend of mine discovered on a recent trip is worth passing along. There was every evidence that roughness was due to a carburetion condition, yet he and a roadside mechanic seemed to be unable to iron out the difficulty with adjustments to the idle screws of the carburetor. About that time a car salesman happened along and looked over the idea and later had to eat his the situation. He decided that they were not synchronizing the two barrels of the duel carburetor One bank of cylinders was thus getting a slightly leaner misture than the other.

Few drivers realize that the power their engine Lolds in reserve for an emergency is largely needed to compensate for their mistakes. Check over your driving honestly and you'll also find that you often have to make full use of the power braking system because you guessed wrong regarding traffic conditions. Engine power is used in very much the same way. You make an error in judgment by failing to anticipate what some other driver is going to do, or scoop to pick up air and direct and you find that the best way out it through the radiator. of the situation is to step on the gas. Without such reserves of engine and braking power we would find ourselves exposed to many times as much danger.

However, it is highly important to see power for what it is and not lapse into the fallacy of believing that we are using normally good judgment when we stick our necks out and assume that we can expect the car to correct conveniently for carelessness. Even power has its limitations.

Mechanic Joe Speaking: "Few motorists realize it but the starting motor should not be used continuously for more than 30 seconds. Always give it a moment's rest between efforts to get the engine under way as this will spare it heat and strain. It is well that the starting motor asks this much consideration because continuous cranking makes it difficult to tell just what the engine really needs: in your effort to start it. You are then less likely to flood it with raw gasoline or forget that it falls to fire because exposed ignition

A. Air is lighter at high altitudes and this automatically cuts engine power, However, where you were; operating the car the altitude isn't sufficient to cause trouble. I think that the bisic reason for the power loss was a combination of overloading the car and the high temperatures. The engine doubtless was trying to overheat.

Q. The engine of my car has been stalling a lot lately, and I have been told that it is due to dirt in the gasoline. I notice this mainly after a long, fast trip.

A. At such times you are using a lot of gas and probably drawing some dirt from the bottom of the gas tank. I would have the tank cleaned out or replaced. Occasion ally a little dirt gets past the filter to unseat the carburetor's needle
